Dear Honorable Reid Hundt,

I am extremely concerned about the quality and amount of children's T.V. In my area of Texas only Public Television has daily programs for children. The Afternoon After School specials air at a time no elementary or secondary school child is at home. These programs are aired at that age, yet they are not out of school when the programs air.

Prime time TV has taken a step toward better family shows such as CBS's Christy and Dr. Quinn but they have a long way to go. There are too few shows families can watch together. The networks should be held accountable for their lack of sensitivity to their influence on children.

Yours truly,

Since 1991 when the Children's Television Act went into effect, the current data suggests that broadcasters are not showing any more children's programming than before the law came into effect. Cable TV has been more responsive than the networks. There is an incredible amount of violence on TV and I see how it affects our children. We choose not to watch TV very much but I worry about all the latch key children that don't have parents to control & monitor what they watch. Our children deserve better,

As an active PTA member, and concerned parent, I definitely feel children's TV should be governed to protect the children's interest. Children think T.V. is the real world & might find it hard to adjust because they have been brainwashed from their 1st yr by what they see on TV. I would also like to see alternate education program geared to pre-schoolers who cannot attend pre-school. Little ones absorb like sponges and though we could absorb the positive and learn truth.

Sincerely -
Dorie Courtney

The Honorable Reed Hundt,

The TV Industry is not providing good programming for children who spend many hours watching TV. We need programs without violence and more programming with children's themes with more air time. Please do what you can to correct this situation.

Dear Honorable Member —

I am very concerned with the fact that the "I Love a Soldier" program, which is being made by the military as a security program for children and families, is being shown on a network during prime time. Violence has become a fact of life for many children and the media has a responsibility for their role.

Sincerely, Pat Brown
